EXCURSION

Use a rare opportunity to learn the old, charming city - Kaluga.

Kaluga is first mentioned in the charter of the Lithuanian Grand Duke Algirdas in 1371. This year is considered the foundation of the city. In 1389 he finally joined the Moscow principality. Since that time, the fate of Kaluga is inextricably linked with the formation and history of the Russian state.

As an outpost, the walled city built on the Oka River, not far from the confluence of the Ugra River, along which 525 years ago in the "great opposition" was finally overcome by the Tatar- Mongol yoke, - Kaluga was an outpost of the Moscow state, a reliable barrier against raids foreigners from the south and west.
